11, 12, and 13. Activities.

Jordan

As detailed in the registration statement, Monitor provided management consulting services for Jordan's Embassy in Washington. The services included a performance assessment and recommendations on how to improve the internal operations of the organization. The services also included overseeing the preparation of a communications strategy directed to the U.S. media and others in the United States.

Libya

As detailed in the registration statement, Monitor's activities with respect to Libya sought to take advantage of a period of improved diplomatic relations and included the following: Monitor contacted and invited prominent international leaders, including in the United States, to visit Libya for meetings with officials of the government of Libya. Monitor created education and information programs about the United States political system. Monitor identified leading figures in the government, media, and academic communities, including in the United States. Monitor supported and conducted public relations on behalf of Libya, including distribution of materials in the United States and support of a public relations firm's outreach to journalists in the United States.

Based on information developed in the course of Monitor's retrospective review of its activities in Libya, to the best of its knowledge, Monitor engaged in the following activities with respect to registration under the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

From 2006 through 2007, Monitor contacted and invited prominent international leaders, including individuals in the United States, to visit Libya for meetings with officials of the government of Libya and other leaders in Libya.

On March 22 to 24, 2006, Richard Perle traveled to Libya and met with senior officials in the Libyan government, including Abdullah al-Sanusi and Col. Muammar Qaddafi. Monitor believes that topics discussed at those meetings included the status of the Middle East peace process, recent developments in the war in Iraq, possible areas of collaboration between the United States and Libya, strategies for combating the spread of Islamist terrorism, and the need for Libya to improve its human rights record.

On July 23 to 25, 2006, Richard Perle again traveled to Libya and again met with senior officials in the Libyan government, including Abdullah al-Sanusi and Col. Muammar Qaddafi. Monitor believes that topics discussed at meetings with Mr. al-Sanusi included strategies for combating the spread of Islamist terrorism, potential collaboration between the United States and Libya on counterterrorism issues, the new relationship between Libya and the United States, individuals who might visit Libya as part of Monitor's visitor program, and the need for Libya to appoint a competent ambassador to the United States. In a meeting with Col. Qaddafi, Monitor believes that Mr. Perle discussed topics including the possibility of U.S.-Libyan cooperation to prevent the spread of radical Islam and steps the Libyan government could take to improve relationships between Muslim and Jewish communities in Libya and throughout the Middle East. Monitor believes that Mr. Perle was accompanied at certain of those meetings by Monitor personnel. Disbursements to Mr. Perle are described in attachment #5.

Monitor Company Group LP, Supplemental Statement

Monitor organized a trip to Libya for Anthony Giddens, which took place from July 28 to 30, 2006. His primary activities consisted of giving a public lecture at Al-Fatah University and meeting government officials and prominent intellectuals. Mr. Giddens's lecture at the university considered questions of globalization and the spread of democracy, with a particular focus on reforms that could encourage equality, liberty, economic growth, and political participation while discouraging strife and partisan bitterness.

Accompanied by Monitor representatives, Mr. Giddens met with Libyan government official Abdullah al-Sanusi, Youssef Sawani, other members of the Constitutional Committee, Col. Qaddafi, as well as with a range of people outside the government. Monitor's review indicates that Mr. Giddens and Col. Qaddafi discussed topics including strategies for improving the performance of the Libyan economy, increasing Libya's engagement with the outside world, and promoting democracy in Libya.

Monitor's review indicates that Mr. Giddens met with Monitor employees before and after he traveled to Libya. On July 21, 2006, in London, Monitor personnel briefed him in advance of his trip, and on July 31, 2006, he and Monitor personnel met in London to discuss the potential for economic and political reform in Libya, together with the future of university education and professional training in the country. Mr. Giddens expressed an interest in publishing an article about his visit to Libya. Disbursements to Mr. Giddens are described in attachment #5.

Monitor arranged a visit to Libya for Francis Fukuyama on August 14 to 17, 2006. Monitor's review suggests that Mr. Fukuyama's activities consisted of giving a lecture at the World Islamic Call Society and meeting with Libyan government officials. Mr. Fukuyama's lecture at the World Islamic Call Society, a Libyan religious and intellectual organization, addressed the increasing spread of free-market capitalism and democracy, with a particular focus on the role of women in economic development and the question of the relative roles of economic growth and culture in promoting democratic reform.

Mr. Fukuyama, accompanied by Monitor personnel, met with Libyan government official Abdullah al-Sanusi; met with Youssef Sawani, Zahi Magerbi, Ibrahim Bougzabi, Professor Mahadebi, and other members of the Constitutional Committee; and met with Col. Qaddafi. Mr. Fukuyama and Col. Qaddafi appear to have discussed a number of topics, including wealth distribution in Libya, John Locke's writings on property, economic inequality in strong and weak economies, the role of American military power in the Middle East, and the dangers posed by the spread of radical Islam.

Monitor's review indicates that Mr. Fukuyama met with Monitor employees before and after he traveled to Libya. On August 1, 2006, in London, Monitor personnel briefed Mr. Fukuyama on his trip. On September 13, 2006, in Washington, D.C., Mr. Fukuyama met with Monitor personnel following the trip. Topics discussed at that meeting appear to have included Mr. Fukuyama's continued interaction with Libya, potential future visitors to Libya, the possibility of Mr. Fukuyama using his observations about Libya and the Green Book as material for discussion in his classes, and Mr. Fukuyama's discussion of his trip to Libya with journalist Judith Miller, Department of Defense official Eric Edelman, and World Bank officials Haffed Al Ghwell and Theodore Ahlers. Disbursements to Mr. Fukuyama are described in attachment #5.

Monitor arranged a visit for Nicholas Negroponte to Libya, which took place on August 16 to 18, 2006. Monitor's review indicates that Mr. Negroponte's primary activities consisted of meetings with Libyan government official Abdullah al-Sanusi and Col. Qaddafi. Mr. Negroponte met with Col. Qaddafi to discuss the work of Mr. Negroponte's non-profit organization, One Laptop Per Child. Monitor did not make disbursements to Mr. Negroponte.

Monitor arranged a visit to Libya for Shaykh Muhammad Hisham Kabbani on August 16 to 18, 2006. Monitor's review indicates that Shaykh Kabbani's primary activities consisted of meetings with prominent Libyan government and religious figures. Shaykh Kabbani met with Libyan religious leader Muhammad Al-Sharif in Tripoli and with Col. Qaddafi. It appears that topics of discussion at both of these meetings included the role of Sufism as an alternative to radical Islam, strategies for improving the relationship between the United States and Libya, and the possibility of collaboration between Shaykh Kabbani and Libyan religious leaders. Shaykh Kabbani appears to have met with Libyan government official Abdullah al-Sanusi.

Monitor's review indicates that Shaykh Kabbani met with Monitor employees before and after he traveled to Libya. On August 15, 2006, in London, Monitor personnel briefed Shaykh Kabbani on his upcoming trip. Shaykh Kabbani also met with Monitor personnel on August 19, 2006, in London and on October 7, 2006, in Fenton, Michigan. Topics of discussion at these meetings included Shaykh Kabbani's previous work with the United States government, Shaykh Kabbani's interest in working with Libya to promote Sufism, Shaykh Kabbani's opposition to radical Islam, and Shaykh Kabbani's desire to receive financial support from Libya for religious, academic, and educational programs. Disbursements related to Shaykh Kabbani are described in attachment #5.

Monitor arranged a visit to Libya for Benjamin Barber on November 4 to 6, 2006. Monitor's review indicates that Mr. Barber's primary activities consisted of a lecture at the Green Book Center and meetings with Libyan government officials. Mr. Barber's lecture at the Green Book Center was attended by Libyan academics and foreign diplomats, and addressed topics such as American efforts to spread democracy and the prospects of the Libyan government making a transition to democracy. Mr. Barber, accompanied by Monitor personnel, met with Libyan government official Abdullah al-Sanusi, with Youssef Sawani, Amal Obeidi, and other members of the Constitutional Committee, and with head of state Col. Qaddafi. It appears that Mr. Barber discussed American politics and Libyan-U.S. relations with Mr. al-Sanusi, the efforts of the Constitutional Committee, and the applicability of the Green Book to contemporary Libya with Col. Qaddafi.

Monitor Company Group LP, Supplemental Statement

Monitor's review indicates that Mr. Barber met twice with Monitor employees in London before he traveled to Libya. On October 18, 2006, and on November 3, 2006, Monitor personnel briefed Mr. Barber on his upcoming trip. On November 6, 2006, Mr. Barber attended a dinner in London with Monitor employees and Saif al-Islam Qaddafi, head of the Gaddafi International Charity and Development Foundation. Disbursements to Mr. Barber are described in attachment #5.

Monitor organized a visit for Bernard Lewis on December 19 to 21, 2006. Monitor's review indicates that Mr. Lewis's primary activities consisted of meeting with Libyan government official Abdullah al-Sanusi and head of state Col. Qaddafi. Mr. Lewis met with Mr. al-Sanusi and their discussion focused on Middle Eastern politics and history. Mr. Lewis met with Col. Qaddafi and appears to have discussed topics including the Arab-Israeli peace process, the threat of radical Islamist terrorism, and Middle Eastern politics and history.

Mr. Lewis met with Monitor employees before and after he traveled to Libya. On December 18, 2006, in London, Monitor personnel briefed Mr. Lewis on his upcoming trip. On February 15, 2007, Mr. Lewis met with Monitor personnel following the trip. Topics of discussion at that meeting included Mr. Lewis's interest in visiting Libya again, his interest in obtaining books written by Col. Qaddafi, discussion of his trip to Libya with U.S. Ambassador to Israel Richard Jones and Israeli government officials and journalists, Mr. Lewis's intent to discuss his trip with other Americans when he returned to the United States, Middle Eastern politics, Libya's image in the West, and other potential visitors to Libya. Disbursements to Mr. Lewis are described in attachment #5.

Monitor arranged a visit to Libya for Francis Fukuyama on January 12 to 14, 2007. Mr. Fukuyama's primary activities appear to have been a lecture at the Green Book Center and meetings with Libyan government officials. Mr. Fukuyama's lecture at the Green Book Center, "Democracy and the Challenges of State Building in Libya," addressed topics including challenges facing underdeveloped states, approaches for strengthening such states, and the role played by culture and history in Libya's economic development.

Monitor's review indicates that Mr. Fukuyama met with Libyan government official Abdullah al-Sanusi in Tripoli, Youssef Sawani, and Libyan head of state Col. Muammar Qaddafi. Mr. Fukuyama and Col. Qaddafi appear to have discussed a number of topics, including theories of principle-agent relationships, Fukuyama's theory of state development, and Qaddafi's ideas about government as articulated in the Green Book.

Mr. Fukuyama met with Monitor employees before and after he traveled to Libya. On January 11, 2007, in London, Monitor personnel briefed Mr. Fukuyama on his upcoming trip. On June 18, 2007, in Washington, D.C., Mr. Fukuyama met with Monitor personnel. Topics discussed at that meeting appear to have included Mr. Fukuyama's views about the likelihood that Libya could successfully strengthen its economy and democratize its government, Mr. Fukuyama's thoughts on the Green Book, and the reaction Mr. Fukuyama received from his students when he discussed his visit to Libya with them.

Monitor organized a visit to Libya for Joseph Nye, which took place on February 8 to 11, 2007. Mr. Nye's primary activities appear to have been a public lecture and a meeting with Libyan head of state Col. Muammar Qaddafi. Mr. Nye and Col. Qaddafi discussed theories of government described in the Green Book, American politics, human rights issues, and the possibilities for development of the Libyan economy. Mr. Nye also had dinner with Saif al-Islam Qaddafi. Disbursements to Mr. Nye are described in attachment #5.

Monitor organized a visit to Libya for Benjamin Barber on February 12 to 14, 2007. Mr. Barber's primary activities appear to have been delivering a lecture at the Green Book Center and a meeting with Col. Qaddafi. Mr. Barber and Col. Qaddafi appear to have discussed topics including direct democracy, Col. Qaddafi's and Mr. Barber's preparations for the March 2, 2007, event, the evolution of Libyan civil society, and the proper role of the Green Book in Libya's reform efforts. Mr. Barber communicated by phone and email with Monitor employees before and after his travel to Libya. The subject of those communications appears to have been preparing Mr. Barber and Col. Qaddafi for the March 2, 2007, event.

Monitor organized an event that took place on March 2, 2007. As part of this event, Monitor organized visits to Libya for David Frost, Anthony Giddens, and Benjamin Barber, which took place on March 1 to 3, 2007. The March 2 event consisted of an extended public debate with Col. Qaddafi about the nature of democracy, concentrating upon the relationship between representative and participatory democracy. In advance of the event, Monitor supervised a public relations firm that contacted media outlets, including in the United States, to invite them to attend and cover the event. A number of news and television journalists attended the event, and the debate was recorded by the BBC. The event was covered in the international media. Disbursements to Mr. Frost are described in attachment #5.

Monitor organized a visit to Libya for Anne-Marie Slaughter and Andrew Moravcsik, which took place April 29 to May 2, 2007. Monitor's review indicates that Ms. Slaughter's and Mr. Moravcsik's activities consisted of meetings with Libyan government officials in Tripoli. Ms. Slaughter and Mr. Moravcsik met with Libyan government official Abdullah al-Sanusi, and discussed topics including relations between the United States and Libya, American politics, and the Darfur crisis. Ms. Slaughter and Mr. Moravcsik met with Libyan government official Mahmoud Gebril, and discussed topics including Libya's economic development and relations between the United States and Libya. Ms. Slaughter and Mr. Moravcsik met with Youssef Sawani and discussed American politics and relations between the United States and Libya. Ms. Slaughter and Mr. Moravcsik met with Saif al-Islam Qaddafi, head of the Gaddafi International Charity and Development Foundation, and with Libyan government officials Hend Siala and Ahmed El-Houderi. Monitor's review indicates that Ms. Slaughter and Mr. Moravcsik were accompanied by Monitor personnel at these meetings.

Ms. Slaughter and Mr. Moravcsik met with Monitor employees before and after their travel to Libya. On April 28, 2007, in London, Monitor personnel briefed Ms. Slaughter and Mr. Moravcsik on their upcoming trip, with particular focus on Libyan politics and the state of Libya's relations with Europe and the United States. Ms. Slaughter and Mr. Moravcsik met with Monitor personnel following the trip and discussed topics such as the possibility that Mr. Moravcsik might write an article about the trip, and the possibility of Ms. Slaughter and Mr.

Monitor Company Group LP, Supplemental Statement

Moravcsik helping to strengthen ties between Libya and the United States. Monitor did not make disbursements to Ms. Slaughter or Mr. Moravcsik.

Monitor organized a visit to Libya for Hernando de Soto on May 30 to June 1, 2007. Monitor's review indicates that Mr. de Soto's primary activities consisted of a scholarly lecture and meeting with Libyan government officials in Tripoli. Mr. de Soto's lecture, "Making Dead Capital Alive," appears to have been delivered at Tripoli's Al-Mahari hotel to a diverse audience of students, Monitor employees, government employees, businesspeople, and members of the press. The lecture focused on Mr. de Soto's efforts to use legal reform to generate capital and economic growth.

Monitor's review indicates that Mr. de Soto met with Libyan government official Abdullah al-Sanusi, and discussed topics including the importance of adopting effective, updated written laws and the economic relationships between wealthy and poor countries. He met with Libyan government official Mahmoud Gebril, and discussed the potential role of the Green Book in Libya's future economic development, and strategies for formalizing the informal economy in developing countries. Mr. de Soto met with Saif al-Islam Qaddafi, head of the Qaddafi International Charity and Development Foundation, where the discussion focused on the track record of the Institute for Liberty and Democracy and the potential role of the Green Book in Libya's future economic development. Finally, Mr. de Soto led a workshop for a cross-section of Libyan government employees on the Institute's efforts to use legal reform to generate capital and economic growth. It appears that Mr. de Soto was accompanied by Monitor personnel at these meetings. Monitor did not make disbursements to Mr. de Soto.

On October 31 to November 1, 2007, Monitor organized visits to Libya for Craig Kennedy and Ron Asmus. Monitor's review indicates that Mr. Kennedy's and Mr. Asmus's activities consisted of meeting with prominent Libyans, including religious leader Mohamed Sharif, entrepreneur Zaineb Othman, OPEC official Tareq Hassan Bek, academic Zahi Megherbi, and Libyan government officials Mohamed Bani, Hamed Arabi El-Houderi, M. Fetisi, and Muhammad Taher Siyalah. Monitor did not make disbursements to Mr. Kennedy or Mr. Asmus.

Monitor believes that, in March 2006, a Monitor partner, Rajeev Singh-Molares, met with staff of the U.S. Congress and officials of the U.S. State Department and U.S. Treasury Department to discuss the company's economic development activities undertaken in Libya on behalf of the Libyan government. In approximately July and August 2007, Monitor personnel supervised the activities of a public relations firm that was conducting public relations for Saif al-Islam Qaddafi, including contacts with U.S. media representatives, in advance of Mr. Qaddafi's announcement of a comprehensive reform agenda in August 2007.

Libya

Following the March 2, 2007, event referenced in attachment #3, Monitor personnel distributed a DVD recording of the event to a variety of individuals in the United States, principally in the academic and think tank community. A copy of this DVD is being concurrently filed with the FARA Unit. Monitor's review has not found a budget associated with this activity.

As indicated in attachment #3, Francis Fukuyama used Col. Qaddafi's Green Book as part of his political science curriculum. Monitor personnel provided Mr. Fukuyama with copies of the Green Book. Monitor's review has not found a budget associated with this activity.
